From Northeast Philly to the Playboy Mansion

Miss August. Val Keil, of Torresdale, is the centerfold in this month's issue of Playboy.

Playboy's centerfold for August is Philly's own Val Keil. / COURTESY OF VAL KEIL

Val Keil sat with her father, brother and then-boyfriend inside her Northeast Philadelphia home and debated the proposition to pose for Playboy.

She submitted the photos without a peep, but when the legendary adult magazine responded with interest within three days, she asked for advice.

"Wait," said the now ex-boyfriend. "You won't even send me naked pictures, but you'll send Playboy naked pictures?"

She thought that was trashy, "but it's funny now because my naked pictures are all over the Internet."

He took a hike, and now the bartender from Torresdale is Playboy magazine's Miss August.

"I don't like to say that I got lucky," said Keil, 22, "because I feel everything happens for a reason."

In this, her first-ever audition for a modeling gig, Keil scored the centerfold in the July/August issue on newsstands now.

Keil, a graduate of MaST Community Charter School, worked at Reedy's Tavern on Frankford Avenue, the Torresdale Frankford Country Club and XFINITY Live! before she decided to submit. On Saturday, she'll return to Reedy's to sign the magazine from 2 to 10 p.m.

"I had a long year of just ups and downs," she said.

She hopped between community colleges and beauty schools before she decided to take a shot. After all, she has good genes: Both her aunt and mom are former Eagles cheerleaders.

Before, when people asked what she wanted to be when she grew up, she said she wanted to get married and stay at home with her eight children. Then, she changed the estimate to six, because eight sounded a bit high.

She had it all mapped out, until she received a phone call from Beverly Hills. The number may change again. "But it worked out," she deadpanned.

Not long after the news of her centerfold spot leaked, the Facebook messages and emails rolled in: "Don't change," or, "You're going to change."

"That kind of annoys me," Keil said, "Because I feel like if they knew me, they would know I'm not that type of girl, and I'm not going to let it get to my head."

"I'm definitely going to enjoy every minute of it," she added, "But it's not something that I'll let get to me."

And she still wants the six children. "Just when I'm ready."

Mansion accident

She's one 'bad-a— chick'

Val Keil was at the Playboy Mansion for July 4, and took a spin on the 100-foot slip-and-slide.

"But somehow I managed to knee myself in the face," she said.

She laughed, adjusted her bikini and stood up. Then another Playmate saw the blood.

She tore a muscle in her face — just under her right eye — which required 15 stitches and a touch-up from a plastic surgeon.

"It was the worst timing," she said, "This is my month!"

She had a black eye, but she shouldn't have a scar.

"I mean, if I have a little scar, that's cool," she said. "It makes me look like a bad-a— chick."

Summer schedule

A note to our readers

It's summertime! This means hot dogs on the beach, ice cream on the stoop, trips to the shore and lots and lots of you escaping the city. This special newspaper features extended movies, entertainment and going-out content to help heat up your already-hot weekend. And if you miss us too much on Friday (or Saturday or Sunday or anytime at all, really), our newsroom remains busy with news updates 24/7 on www.metro.us. Sticking around the city? Then check our local events site, My Metro at mymetro.us for ideas on how to get out and about this summer.

Triple. Four shot, three killed, in three separate shootings

Three people were killed and a fourth critically injured in three separate city shootings.

The first fatal shooting occurred in West Oak Lane the night of July 9. A man was shot as he opened his apartment door.

Two people were then shot near an Olney elementary school, also on July 9.

A 21-year-old man was killed by the gunfire, while a 17-year-old boy was in critical condition after being shot four times.

A third homicide happened in Strawberry Mansion, where a 33-year-old man was gunned down, early on July 10. METRO

Good news

Fire dept. gets $18M in grants

After several consecutive years of firefighter fatalities, contract disputes and labor strife, the embattled Philadelphia Fire Department has finally received some good news.

The Fire Department will receive a total of $18.4 million in grants from the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, according to an announcement Wednesday, July 10, from U.S. Rep. Chaka Fattah.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency, through its Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response Program, earmarked $16.3 million for Philadelphia to hire more frontline firefighters.

The Department can also over the next two years use those funds to prevent firefighter layoffs, rehire those that have already been laid off and recruit volunteer firefighters.

The Fire Department will in addition receive a $2.1 million grant from Homeland Security's Assistance to Firefighters Grants Program to help offset the cost of tools as well as other resources that are necessary for responding to fires and medical emergencies.

Police: Drunk bicyclist hit marked cruiser

Delaware State Police early Wednesday cited Huseyin Engin Uysal, 22, for bicycling under the influence after he allegedly crashed into a fully marked patrol car in Rehoboth Beach.

Investigators said Uysal was around 1:30 a.m. riding without a headlight and weaving in and out of the travel lane while texting. As a trooper attempted to stop him, Uysal allegedly crashed into the back of his car.

He was cited for bicycling under the influence, among other citations. METRO

Cops: Man threw bodily fluids on Wal-Mart patron

Gross. Delaware police arrested a man for allegedly throwing bodily fluids on a woman's leg in a New Castle Wal-Mart aisle.

Frank Short Jr. / DEL. STATE POLICE

Delaware State Police on Tuesday, July 9, arrested a Middletown man for allegedly throwing bodily fluid on a female customer at a Wal-Mart in New Castle.

Investigators said a 20-year-old woman was at 3:30 p.m. standing in a store aisle using her phone when a man walked by her and she felt a liquid thrown onto her leg. The woman looked down and saw bodily fluid running down her thigh and calf, according to authorities.

The suspect allegedly followed the woman as she walked through the store. Police said she eventually found two Wal-Mart employees, who took her to a secure location and called police.

Arriving troopers said they identified the man who allegedly threw the bodily fluid as Frank Short Jr., 22. He was taken into custody later July 9 without incident and charged with offensive touching with bodily fluid, harassment, lewdness and disorderly conduct.

Cpl. John Day said that, as of July 10, authorities had not yet determined exactly what substance the fluid was.

He said that state troopers, after interviewing Short, became concerned he may have victimized others. Police are asking any potential victims to come forward.

State reps to float same-sex marriage bill

Rights. State Reps. Steve McCarter and Brian Sims plan to introduce a bill pushing for marriage equality in Pennsylvania.

In the wake of the Supreme Court's decision striking down the federal Defense of Marriage Act and the American Civil Liberties Union announcement of a lawsuit seeking to overturn the state's "mini-DOMA," State Rep. Steve McCarter, D-154, announced plans to introduce a marriage equality bill in the Pennsylvania Legislature.

"Banning same-sex marriage does not contribute anything to our commonwealth — in fact, I truly believe it is a detriment to Pennsylvania," McCarter said in a statement.

"How many talented businessmen and businesswomen, entrepreneurs, educators and public servants have we lost to New York, Maryland and Delaware simply because those states will recognize their relationship and Pennsylvania will not?" he added. "It's time we stop excluding our own citizens and end these discriminatory practices."

McCarter said he and state Rep. Brian Sims, D-182, are currently gathering support and plan to later this year introduce a bill "which would finally bring Pennsylvania into the 21st century and allow marriage equality for all citizens."

North American retailers set five-year Bangladesh factory plan

Nearly 20 North American retailers including Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and Gap Inc. unveiled a five-year safety plan for Bangladesh garment factories that would include inspecting every factory within a year.

Train accident

Railway boss says sabotage not suspected in Quebec crash

There is no suspicion that the train disaster that destroyed the heart of the town of Lac-Megantic and left dozens killed or missing was caused by sabotage, the head of the railway, Ed Burkhardt, said.

It was plain someone had tampered with the locomotive of the Montreal, Maine & Atlantic train before the explosion, and it has now emerged that it was the fire department that was putting out an earlier fire, Burkhardt, the chairman of the railway, told reporters. REUTERS

Pilots relied on automatic equipment for airspeed

NTSB. Much of the information released suggests pilot error as main focus of the investigation.

Shown here is the cockpit of a Boeing 777. / GETTY IMAGES

The pilots aboard the Asiana Airlines Boeing 777 that crashed in San Francisco relied on automatic equipment — an auto-throttle system — to maintain airspeed and did not realize the plane was flying too slowly until it was just 200 feet above the ground, the head of the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board said on Tuesday.

In her third detailed briefing on the July 6 crash, NTSB Chairwoman Deborah Hersman also said two flight attendants were ejected from the plane after its tail hit a seawall in front of the runway and was torn off. Both were found injured but alive on the side of the runway.

Airspeed

The flight data recorder showed the plane was traveling 25 percent below its target airspeed as it came in for landing.

Hersman said many questions remained about the incident. The South Korean airline's flight crew members were not tested for drugs or alcohol after the crash, a requirement for pilots of U.S.-based carriers involved in accidents, she said.

The accounts given to investigators by the pilots, as relayed by Hersman, confirmed information from the plane's flight data recorder that showed the plane was traveling 25 percent below its target airspeed as it came in for landing. REUTERS

Judge. Apple Inc. conspired to raise prices on e-books

In a sweeping rejection of Apple Inc.'s strategy for selling electronic books on the Internet, a federal judge ruled that the company conspired with five major publishers to raise e-book prices.

U.S. District Judge Denise Cote in Manhattan found "compelling evidence" that Apple violated federal antitrust law by playing a "central role" in a conspiracy with publishers to eliminate retail price competition and raise e-book prices.

Wednesday's decision could expose Apple to substantial damages.

Apple was accused of pursuing the conspiracy to undercut online retailer Amazon.com Inc.'s e-book dominance, causing some e-book prices to rise to $12.99 or $14.99 from the $9.99 that Amazon charged. Amazon once held a 90 percent market share. REUTERS

NOT YOU AGAIN?

How is it possible that in our nation of 310 million people, the same ones surface over and over again, convinced that they are destined to lead us? I write this, of course, as Anthony Weiner, Sarah Palin, Rick Perry and Eliot Spitzer are once again swirling through the news. Each is in the process of or pondering a run for high office yet again, and I find this, in a word, astonishing. And in another word, irritating.

I'm not trashing them for their past records or political peccadillos … or, in the case of Texan Perry, his armadillos. Each has proven at some juncture capable of winning the public's trust and support, and heaven forbid I should impede their quest to, as Steely Dan once sang, "Do It Again." I'll even put aside the ready arsenal of hooker and Russia-from-my-house jokes I have at my elbow. (Well,

Weiner / GETTY IMAGES

I suppose I can pass on just one punchline: "So the hot dog vendor says, 'No, I'm pretty sure I did not get a tip.'")

I'm just saying it must take a mind-blowing sense of mission for anyone to emerge from a political defeat or scandal so ready to jump back into the fray. Perry and Palin? Sure, they'd fit the bill if you were looking for a great name for a new steak sauce, but as presidential power players they were spectacular failures. Spitzer and Weiner? Both were chased from office like Edward Snowden at a CIA picnic. And yet, all four of them are back in the game, as if neither party could possibly find anyone else capable of carrying the political torch.

I'm not sure what it says about us as voters, but this does not suggest a lot of imagination on the part of the two major parties. Because you can bet your ballot there are people in this vast country who would make great leaders if either side would just go find them, instead of spending all their time on recycling candidates like old cans.

Quoted

"It must take a mind-blowing sense of mission for anyone to emerge from a political defeat or scandal so ready to jump back into the fray."

Bombing suspect pleads not guilty to terror attack

Trial. In a thick accent, Tsarnaev entered several not-guilty pleas.

Accused teenage terrorist Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, 19, pleaded not guilty to all 30 charges related to the deadly Boston Marathon bombings Wednesday in federal court.

The shackled suspect wore an orange jumpsuit and had a crooked smile as he entered the silent courtroom, before flashing a grin to a group of spectators seated in the first row.

His lawyers occasionally patted him in an apparent effort to offer comfort, however Tsarnaev did not appear emotional. Despite reports of severe injuries sustained during a shootout with police, Tsarnaev appeared healthy, with a full head of curly hair.

This is the first time Tsarnaev has appeared in public since his April 19 arrest in Watertown, Mass. / SKETCH BY JANE FLAVELL COLLINS

Charges

30

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev pleaded not guilty to all 30 charges related to the Boston Marathon bombings.

His self-described supporters, seated in the back of the courtroom, let out an excited "yes," after Tsarnaev first spoke his plea, and were asked more than once by court security to quiet down.

Tsarnaev's sister was also in the courtroom, whimpering quietly, wiping away tears and holding a cooing baby. She shielded her faced with a white headscarf.

Following his plea, Tsarnaev blew a kiss in her direction before being led out by federal marshals. The entire proceeding was over in less than 10 minutes.

Prior to the hearing, there was a mad rush of people trying to get into the packed courtroom, which had seats reserved for 30 of the bombing survivors.

Outside, demonstrators seeking freedom for the accused terrorist and claiming the bombing was a hoax, clashed with bystanders who were present at the marathon finish line.

It was the first time Tsarnaev has appeared in public since his April 19 arrest in Watertown, Mass., where he was found injured, hiding in a dry-docked boat.

Seventeen of the charges brought against Tsarnaev carry a potential death penalty. His next court date is Sept. 23.

Defense rests its case.
Zimmerman will not take the witness stand

Lawyers for George Zimmerman rested their case Wednesday without calling the former Neighborhood Watch volunteer to testify, setting up the final stages of his closely watched murder trial for the shooting of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin.

"After consulting with counsel, (I have decided) not to testify, your honor," Zimmerman said in response to questions from Seminole County Judge Debra Nelson.

It was a rare chance to hear Zimmerman speak, as the 29-year-old sat emotionless throughout most of the proceedings, smartly dressed in suits and ties.

Texas House approves sweeping abortion restrictions

The Texas House of Representatives on Wednesday gave final approval to a bill that would ban most abortions after 20 weeks of pregnancy, set strict health and safety standards for abortion clinics, and restrict use of the so-called abortion pill. The House, which gave preliminary approval to the bill late Tuesday, voted 96 to 49 on Wednesday to send it to the state Senate.

Q&A

Have you seen "Man of Steel?"

No, I haven't. I haven't seen many movies, because I've been making one. The only two or three times I've gone to the movies in the last few years have been to movies that my daughters want to see. So I went to "Les Miserables" and I went to some animated movies — movies that I would not necessarily have gravitated towards. But that's being a parent, taking your daughters to see the Justin Bieber concert movie.

GUILLERMO DEL TORO

The "Pacific Rim" director talks destroying cities in a civilized way.

THE MAN WHO WOULD PLAY WITH BATTLEBOTS

Guillermo del Toro is first and foremost a movie buff, which has been causing him a distinct amount of unhappiness. You see, del Toro has been so busy making movies — particularly his latest, the giant robots vs. giant monsters blockbuster "Pacific Rim" — that he hasn't had any time to actually watch other people's movies. Or at least that's the excuse he gives for not having seen "Man of Steel" or the first installment of "The Hobbit," which he was originally pegged to direct.

There's been a lot of criticism about the levels of carnage shown in "Man of Steel." Your film also features a great deal of urban destruction. How do you keep that from crossing the line from fun into too realistic?

Well, kaiju movies by definition bring a completely escapist fun in these type of fights. When you're a kid and you're watching Godzilla stomp a bunch of tanks or jets or cut through a city, the proportions of these things are so enormous that you cannot correlate them to anything real. What I do is I then bring in visually a very different sense of style from reality. I have these super-colored lights illuminating the rain, so it looks like a living comic book or a living anime. And the thing that I do very, very consciously is I vacated all the streets so they would be empty of people. So you're never thinking, "Oh, the kaiju just crushed 600 people."

Are you planning to do another non-English language film soon, or do you live in Hollywood exclusively now?

Yeah, I would love to. I produce a lot of movies in Latin America and Spain, and I'm producing a movie right now in Mexico. As a director, I would love to do it, but I need to find a story that suits me. It's not like I have a drawer full of stories in Spanish and in English. [Laughs]

What determines if a story is better told in Spanish rather than English?

You cannot aspire to do a movie that is as quirky as "Pan's Labyrinth" in the Hollywood machinery. It would get tested and noted by executives to death. It would end up having a happy ending and all that bulls—. And at the same time you cannot end up with a movie that is as spectacular and huge and magnificent in showmanship as "Pacific Rim" if you do it in Mexico or Spain. So, depending on the scale of the story, depending on if you need to protect the production value and spectacle or if you need to protect the content and quirkiness of the story, you go from one [end of the] scale to another.

Playing favorites

"Pacific Rim" introduces audiences to numerous "kaiju" — giant, belligerent monsters — and "jaegers" — the giant, human-piloted robots mankind creates to fight them off and save the planet.

"My favorite jaeger is Cherno Alpha, because I think he is adorable," says del Toro. "It looks like a giant iron boiler. And my favorite kaiju is Leatherback, the gorilla-esque one, because I fully identify with his beer belly."

Liam James plays a depressed teenager in "The Way, Way Back." / CLAIRE FOLGER

The summer movie you may forget

Sundance hit. The guys who wrote "The Descendants" try for a cliched coming-of-age saga.

Jim Rash, who played the semi-ambiguously gay, cross-dressing Dean Pelton on "Community," and Nat Faxon, who appears in the comedies of Broken Lizard, are both Oscar winners. That's because they wrote the somber, thoughtful script for "The Descendants."

Neither fact is what you might expect. That they wrote and made their joint directorial debut with "The Way, Way Back" makes more sense. The film's description reads like a parody: It's a "summer I'll never forget" indie with an overqualified cast that was picked up for gobs of money at Sundance. (It also features Toni Collette and Steve Carell, alumni of the ultimate Sundance crossover, "Little Miss Sunshine.")

The kid who'll never forget this summer is Duncan (Liam James), an awkward, permanently sullen 14-year-old stuck on a beach house trip with his divorcee mom (Collette) and her cruel boyfriend (Carell), who kicks off the movie telling Duncan he'd rate him a three on the 10-point scale. Such casual abuse is, thankfully, thin on the ground in the film's remainder, which finds Duncan inevitably gaining confidence. While the grown-ups day drink like teenagers, he finds himself frequenting then suddenly working at the local, rickety, retro '80s water park.

It's here that a boy so socially awkward it doesn't appear he's ever spoken to someone who's not his mom can find questionable friends, chief among them an aging, too-cool-for-school water park employee (Sam Rockwell). He also gets a love interest in the girl literally next door (AnnaSophia Robb). These are all cliches, right down to the killjoy third act tonal shift, when the hazy, lazy, good-times vibe turns serious and emo. But this isn't just a high-toned, high-buzzed twist on the '80s vacation likes of "Summer Rental." There are a few twists that make it tough to shrug off. Duncan may not speak or have any apparent personality, but he's not a secret sensitive type. He really doesn't appear to have any talents or an inner life. It's suggested that, in all likelihood, he'll wind up like the rest of the water park staff: People, like Rockwell's furtively remorseful antihero, who've stayed at this dumb job too long, letting even modest ambitions go unrealized and only periodically pining for something more. There's a very real, only somewhat delved-into melancholy to the film, an air of disappointment and self-hatred that's more serious than the "serious" developments in its final stretch.

PHILLY LOVES A WINNER

Second verse, better than first

Horror anthology. The quickie sequel 'V/H/S/2' is a slight improvement over its predecessor.

Tossed-off, quickie sequels to modestly successful exploitation fare are nothing new. "Black Caesar," to name just one, made enough money in 1972 that it had a sequel, "Hell Up in Harlem," later that year. The first found footage horror anthology "V/H/S" premiered at Sundance 2012, and though it made but a pittance, the low underhead — it's shot with inexpensive HD cameras, with some light, albeit impressively organic, special effects — all but assured there would be more. "V/H/S/2" is, of course, more of the same. Once again, the shorts blithely break the rules, with "found" videos that have nonetheless been edited after the fact from multiple sources. (It's no spoiler to reveal in every case the cinematographers wind up gorily offed.) Once again, most of the actors resort to panicked, artless swearing. And once again, title be damned, no episode is on grimy, retrograde VHS.

The quality, however, is slightly better. As with the first, name auteurs sit in with relative newbies, and the names mop the floor with them. The only returning director is Adam Wingard, who did the silly, semi-sensical wraparound story there, but not the silly, semi-sensical one here. In "Clinical Trials," a young man's new camera eye leads to him being plagued by some kind of ghostly, belligerent demons. It embodies the male-dominated, fanboy worldview of the first, where women exist to be badasses who whimsically offer their naked bodies to weak men. "Slumber Party Alien Abduction" manages to avoid this problem, specifically by redoing "Cloverfield" on a small scale, with a family under attack and the camera attached to a dog's head.

These are fun, but the ones by the established pros go deeper. "A Ride in the Park" brings Eduardo Sanchez, who made no less than the classic of the genre "The Blair Witch Project," and gives him zombie cyclists with tiny GoPro cameras atop their helmets. It's the rare (though not only) zombie film to "humanize" the undead (as much as one can), with certain monsters remembering glimpses of their bodies' previous lives.

The must-see segment comes courtesy of Gareth Evans. The director of the relentless (and exhausting) Indonesian martial arts smack-em-up "The Raid: Redemption" (and its forthcoming sequel) heads to a cult commune, and then keeps topping himself, piling one insanity atop another until the thing's about to burst. If anyone ever makes an anthology film of the too-rare gems from anthology films, Evans' would be a must-have.

Zombie bikers are one of the highlights of the found footage anthology "V/H/S/2." / MAGNET RELEASING

Fueled by initial dislike for each other, two competitive co-workers find their animosity turn to passion in this indie American drama written by G.A. Hauser.

Take two ambitious men, one top LA advertising firm, add a competition for the same high ranking job and you have the potential for an explosion. Instantly the competing men detest each other on sight. Handsome, clean-cut Steve Miller quit the LAPD to work in the calm environment of a business office. What he didn't realize was that the advertising industry was just as cut-throat as the mean streets of the City of Angels. When an exotic British newcomer is hired on, Steve knows this man is out for blood. Mark Richfield, the glamorous new kid in the office, soon wins favor with the big boss and co-workers causing Steve to cringe in jealousy. After a crazy night in the Santa Fe desert when a team building exercise on a business retreat goes wrong, the two men share a night of passion that neither can forget.

Wrongly assuming Mark is gay, Steve is devastated to learn that he is planning to be married in a month's time. Meanwhile, Mark's life falls into a complete shambles as the wedding machine barrels full steam ahead and he no longer loves his increasingly demanding fiancée. Torn between passionate love and passionate hatred, Steve and Mark endure agonizing decisions that will affect their lives forever.

A big giant beast terrorizes humanity in the robots-vs.-monsters movie "Pacific Rim." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Rock 'em sock 'em robot nonsense

Big monster movie. Guillermo del Toro's latest is a brain-dead behemoth.

There are many jobs at which Guillermo del Toro would excel: As a creature designer, as a creator of sheer mood, as a star group writer — the guy who sits in the corner, throwing out crazy, brilliant ideas for others to pound into some kind of shape. He's not really a leader, as a leader needs discipline and exactitude. Del Toro has neither. His films, even his best ones, are sloppy, with maddening bursts of unbridled creativity made with little organization. Even his serious films ("The Devil's Backbone" and "Pan's Labyrinth") are weakly structured and short on ideas — but, like the "Hellboy" films and "Blade II" (his masterpiece), have cool creatures and atypically gorgeous digital effects.

This is to say that, in theory, the ideal movie for del Toro is one where giant robots battle giant aliens. This is "Pacific Rim," a noisy monstrosity that embraces the notion that its director can't tell a story and can't see through intriguing ideas but has a knack for filmmaking that's by turns (and sometimes simultaneously) visceral and elegant.

The plot is (thankfully) simple: In the near future, monsters from another universe (called "kaiju") have risen from the sea. The world's nations have met this threat by joining together and erecting towering rock 'em sock 'em robots. The humans are equal parts cliched and reliably stock: There's a bland taciturn hero (Charlie Hunnam), a hot brainiac nursing vengeance against the kaiju (Rinko Kikuchi), a St. Crispin's Day-style speech-spouting leader amusingly named Stacker Pentecost (Idris Elba) and wacky scientists (Charlie Day and Burn Gorman), because nerds are fun.

'Pacific Rim'

Director. Guillermo del Toro

Stars. Charlie Hunnam, Rinko Kikuchi

Rating. PG-13

"To fight monsters we created monsters," goes one of the taglines. Don't worry about the Frankensteinian implications. This has no interest in addressing philosophical concerns, or thinking about much of anything. This has its drawbacks: An hour is wasted wondering who will pilot the big robots. When the battles belatedly come, they're pummeling, if not always clear. Dinosaur-like behemoths of varying builds and features smash with clangy, rusty mega-automaton, always at nighttime, sometimes in the rain. One tussle threatens to take place in daylight, but quickly heads to darker environs. (Don't see this in post-converted 3-D, which renders everything murkier than it is already.)

Might wins over sense, and the battles are fun. Del Toro is smart and calculating enough to slowly parcel out cool weaponry (a sword!). Once a bot uses a giant boat as a bat, one's brain shuts down, and most is forgiven. It's hard to love a movie that teases some intriguing nonsense about mind-melds, only to drop it once it becomes too complicated. Then again, it's easy to (hesitantly) love a film so in awe of grease and gears and rust — where digital technology at one point fails, and analogue has to save the day. Swoon.

YORUBA RICHEN

The filmmaker explores homophobia among African Americans in "The New Black."

GIVING EACH SIDE THEIR TIME

THE PHILADELPHIA CINEMA ALLIANCE

The documentary "The New Black," from director Yoruba Richen, shows how the African-American community is divided when it comes to the issue of homosexuality in general and same-sex marriage in particular. Richen alternates between the opposing viewpoints, including straight LGBT ally Sharon Lettman-Hicks and anti-marriage equality pastor Derek McCoy, letting each express his or her position as their state of Maryland votes on marriage equality. Richen will introduce "The New Black," which plays QFest on Saturday, July 13, at 4:45 p.m. at Ritz at the Bourse. A Q&A will follow the screening.

Was there a particular interview or exchange that crystallized your need to make this film?
Sharon's family barbecue showed the gamut of feelings about this issue. It was funny, poignant and angry. Also, when I found Tonex, the [gay] Gospel singer, who crystallized what was happening in the black church. I felt they could demonstrate what was going on here.

What are the challenges of tackling such a divisive topic within the black community? Was there any backlash?
I am pretty sheltered in terms of being an out lesbian [in New York City]. I did have people say this is very controversial, and we as a community don't talk about it. But I also think there was a hunger for it, especially because of the recent political events unfolding.

You alternate between pro and con positions, letting each side tell their story. What was your narrative strategy?
As an African-American [filmmaker], we don't often get the opportunity to tell our story in a complex way. That is part of my desire to tell stories — even things I don't agree with, or are not my opinion. To understand the complexity gives it more nuance. It was important to have various viewpoints, while also being clear that I have a point of view.

Did people's minds change about the topic while you were making the film, or is this going to always be an agree-to-disagree issue?
It would be interesting to go back to these folks a year from now and see what the folks voting against it feel about it [then]. I think it's too early to say. Will people change? Or will their views die out, like racism?

Annual fest is here and queer

Film Festival. The 18th annual QFest launches into its first packed week.

Arriving as it always does in the midst of summer, QFest once again offers hundreds of LGBT films from around the world, from high-profile releases with famous faces to obscurities from the fringes. Here are some worth considering:

'Breaking Through'

The dozens of LGBT elected officials profiled in this absorbing documentary are heartening role models who give a voice to minorities. Affecting testimonies address the agony of keeping one's sexual identity secret, the impact of coming out and — in the case of Sen. Tammy Baldwin and Hispanic Democratic Lesbian Sheriff Lupe Valdez (in Republican Dallas County) — the thrill of victory in a hard-fought campaign. Sunday, 12 p.m., Ritz at the Bourse

'First Period'

Meet Cassie (writer Brandon Alexander III in drag). She's new in school and wants to be cool, but butts up against the Heathers (Lauren Rose Lewis and Karli Kaiser) and their hunky boyfriends. Hoping to become popular before her 16th, she befriends another outcast, Maggie (Dudley Beene, also in drag). "First Period" generates laughs from the fabulous costumes and hilarious dialogue, as well as popsicle porn, gross-out jokes and a stunning catfight. Saturday, 9:45 p.m., Ritz East; Monday, 5 p.m., Ritz East

'Meth Head'

At a meth awareness fundraiser, Kyle (Lukas Haas) tries some crystal, which begins his downward spiral. So too does co-writer/director Jane Clark's well-meaning but lousy addiction drama. Losing his job, his boyfriend (Wilson Cruz) and his self-worth, Kyle starts lying, cutting himself and selling his body — having sex for cash to buy drugs. Haas gives a nervy performance, but "Meth Head" is too preachy to be an effective cautionary tale. Only trans actress Candis Cayne impresses as Kyle's saintly neighbor.

'Where I Am'

This poignant documentary profiles Philadelphian Robert Drake, a gay writer who was attacked by two young men in Ireland in 1999. While Drake suffered brain damage and other trauma, he opted to "get better, not bitter." His attitude and resilience — as well as his capacity for forgiveness — are what make this film, about his return to the scene of the crime, so moving. It's the emotional scenes that make "Where I Am" so powerful. Friday, 7:15 p.m., East; July 19, 5:15 p.m., Ritz East

James Franco directed "Interior. Leather Bar." / THE PHILADELPHIA CINEMA ALLIANCE

'Interior. Leather Bar'

• • • ◦ ◦

With no one paying attention, James Franco has directed 20 films. His 16th will only raise more questions about the gay rumors that surround him. Part documentary, part fiction, it delves into Franco's obsession with the missing 40 minutes of "Cruising," William Friedkin's notorious 1980 thriller set amidst the gay leather bar scene of late '70s Greenwich Village. He hopes to recreate the sleazy, often pornographic excised footage with a straight, married man as his tortured Al Pacino. This is a small film, only somewhat realized by design, bringing up more questions about its maker than answers. Friday, 7 p.m., Ritz East; Saturday, 12:15 p.m., Ritz East

'Truth'

• • • ◦ ◦

Handcuffed in a jail cell, Caleb (Sean Paul Lockhart) recounts a crime he doesn't recall. Is he being honest when he recounts his sweet-turned-sour romance with Jeremy (writer/director Rob Moretti)? What about his confessions of being abandoned by his mother as a child? Is Caleb ever telling the truth? "Trust" starts out compelling — save for some hammy/cheesy flashbacks — but as secrets and lies are uncovered in its third act, it devolves, like the characters, who behave badly. Still, Lockhart is appropriately sexy and sinister here, and most viewers likely won't mind the manipulation. Friday, 9:30 p.m., Ritz East; Sunday, 12 p.m., Ritz East

Shine bright like a diamond

Diamond Rings' John O'Regan won't be pigeonholed. / NORMAN WONG

Synth-pop. There's more to Diamond Rings than glitter.

If you were to catch a Diamond Rings set for the first time, and had no knowledge of or expectations for their music, your initial reaction might be ... whoa!

Because the heavily '80s-influenced synth-pop outfit (the solo project of Toronto-bred John O'Regan that recently expanded to include a full band) seems designed to catch you off-guard and throw you off balance. O'Regan dresses the part of a Ziggy Stardust-era David Bowie — makeup and all — vogueing for the crowd and throwing his angular, androgynous form around the stage.

"Yeah, Bowie comes up a lot," says O'Regan. "I think because, obviously, there aren't as many men in music who wear make-up as there are women. But I think when I look to my inspiration in terms of what I do aesthetically, it's probably women more ... say people like Annie Lennox or Grace Jones — women who are assertive and powerful without sort of stooping to the lowest common denominator and just prancing around in a bra and panties. I think it's empowering."

O'Regan's empathy for and identification with femininity has spurred some speculation about his sexuality. And, for some, his flamboyant stage persona might seem like shtick. But that's all sort of beside the point.

"I think, initially, it was just a way for me to unsettle the audience, by kind of unsettling myself," he muses. "When I started out in Toronto, trying to make a name for myself, a lot of what was going on was just heteronormative indie rock."

With Diamond Rings, O'Regan (who previously, and briefly, fronted a fairly "heteronormative" indie band of his own, The D'Urbervilles, before going solo in 2009), wanted to step outside that box. Really, he wanted to smash apart that box's walls.

"The goal became to kind of present a show where I could leave people not fully sure of what they've just seen," he says. "A lot of times you go see a band and you feel like you've figured out the whole thing within the first minute. My goal is to always keep engaging people, or re-engaging people, and that was kind of a big approach with the new record [2012's "Free Dimensional"]. I think it's important for people to see that people aren't just one thing. People can be a lot of different things all trapped in one body."

A 'Totally Biased' opinion, shouted as loud as possible

W. Kamau Bell says what he thinks. / MATTHIAS CLAMER, FX

Stand up. W. Kamau Bell is attracting viewers with his controversial take on the news.

Funnyman W. Kamau Bell has his own point of view, but that doesn't stop him from taking on the day's most controversial stories on his hit show "Totally Biased with W. Kamau Bell."

Yet, timing will affect when he strikes.

"I wanted to talk about George Zimmerman ever since the show started, but the news cycle wasn't on my side," Bell says. "So I was waiting for the opportunity, and then when I found it, I felt we leapt on it with two feet."

The opportunity came when jury selection began. Bell strongly suggested a panel consisting of Public Enemy's Chuck D, an overweight version of Al Sharpton, the ghost of Malcolm X and "angry Bill Cosby."

Yep, that should do the trick.

Bell is a San Francisco stand-up comic who was discovered by Chris Rock and given his own TV show last year. "Totally Biased" is drawing lots of positive attention for Bell's sharp-witted and racially aware takes on current events, with The New York Times calling Bell "the most promising new talent in political comedy in many years."

Starting in September, the series moves from once a week on FX to four times a week on the new FXX channel. "The thing that we've run into ... is that we've had too much material for each episode, so we've had to make some hard cuts," Bell says. "So, with four days, you get to be in that area where 'The Daily Show' and ['The] Colbert [Report'] are in."

Bell and the writers of "Totally Biased" are touring most major markets with a live show this summer.

"For me, I love standing in front of a screen yelling about the events of the day, but I also love yelling into a microphone about the events of the day without a screen behind me," Bell says.

At the races. Lace your sneakers up and get ready to party.

Running can mean logging mile after mile with nothing to stare at but the red numbers glaring at you from the treadmill counter. Or it can mean lacing up your kicks and preparing for a party. You decide whether you want that party to include music-synced neon lights, mud pits and slides, or a tie-dye rainstorm of color.

How to host your own clambake

Seafood. You don't have to be on the beach to enjoy this New England tradition.

Executive Chef Karsten Hart hosts clambakes at The Castle Hill Inn in Newport, R.I. (www.castlehillinn.com). / CASTLE HILL INN

Clambakes are as beloved in New England as summer. But you don't have to have a beach (although that helps) to host your own at home. Executive Chef Karsten Hart, of The Castle Hill Inn in Newport, R.I., has been the master and commander of around 30 clambakes over the past two years for guests (his seafood-y to-do was voted Rhode Island's Best Clambake by Rhode Island Monthly). Here, he breaks down how to love the bivalves.

What are the steps to take to host a clambake if you're on the beach?
Before building your clambake pit, one needs a proper wire basket to place the food in, burlap, a few sailing tarps and lots of wood. The baskets can be custom-made and purchased from [www.anysizebasket.com]. I suggest purchasing at least two. The rest of the equipment can be found at a local hardware store. Once you have purchased all your equipment, you simply need to dig a hole (around 5 feet across and 3 feet deep). Once you have dug the hole, place enough wood to fill, and light using newspaper and a match.

What are the steps to take if you don't have sand? Can you still have a clambake?
At Castle Hill Inn, our clambake is perched well above Grace Kelly Beach, where we have no sand, only dirt and rocks. The advantage of building a pit in the earth rather than a beach is that you avoid having sand in your food, which is inevitable when preparing food on a beach.

It's not just clams in your clambake. What else do you add?
We add homemade chorizo, potatoes, corn and lobsters, but you could add just about anything. This past year, we buried a whole pig in the clambake pit and smoked it for four hours before unveiling. It was delicious.

Is the clambake a Rhode Island tradition?
Clambakes are traditional to New England. There are two native Rhode Island tribes — the Narragansett and Wampanoag — who were known for their clambake celebrations. Some historians even state that the clambake may have been one of the first Thanksgiving celebrations.

Lamar Odom cheated on Khloe Kardashian with a stripper

Khloe Kardashian has kicked husband Lamar Odom out of their home for cheating.

But it gets worse. He cheated with a stripper. For more than a year. And he paid her.

According the bombshell report from Star magazine, the woman in question is 29-year-old stripper Jennifer Richardson, whom he met at the Stadium Club strip club in Washington, D.C., after a Clippers game last year.

The first night they hooked up, Odom took care to take "her phone apart and put the pieces in different spots all around the room" so she couldn't record their tryst. But that doesn't keep a resourceful stripper from becoming a "source" to Star magazine for money!

The "affair" (which honestly just sounds like a bunch of sexual encounters after games in various hotel rooms around the country) lasted for months, with Odom at one point "gifting" her $3,000. Oh, and they had a threesome. (I don't know how that falls into the blame game. Does that mean he cheated with several women, or with just one woman but very spectacularly?)

Star reports that Khloe found out about the affair and kicked him out — but they would continue to get back together.

But now it looks like they are headed for a divorce — sources tell Star that Odom moved out for good on June 3.

Friends, you know it's bad when Scott Disick seems like the good Kardashian significant other.

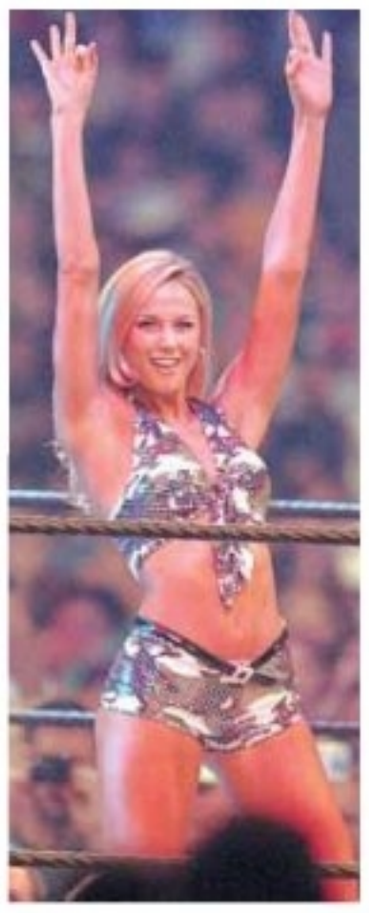
Talking points

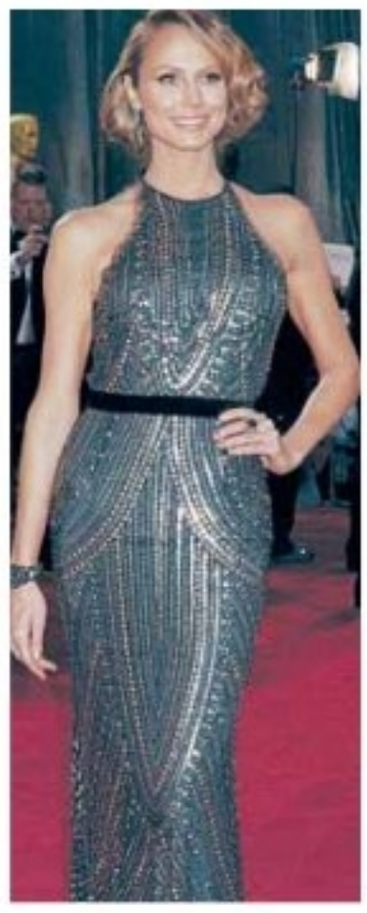
'The Canyons' director defends Lindsay Lohan

According to "The Canyons" director Paul Schrader, working with Lindsay Lohan is worth all the headaches. "Tardiness, unpredictability, tantrums, absences, neediness, psychodrama — yes, all that, but something more, that thing that keeps you watching someone on screen, that thing you can't take your eyes off of, that magic, that mystery," Schrader writes in Film Comment. "All the drama, the mishegas, all the stress — that means little. A director can shoot around misbehavior. He can't shoot around lack of charisma. I just wish it was easier for Lindsay."

Lopez on that famous Versace dress

The revealing green Versace dress Jennifer Lopez wore at the 2000 Grammys has become the stuff of legend, but Lopez herself remembers not getting what all the fuss was about. "When I came onstage with David Duchovny, who was the biggest star in the world, he said to the audience, 'Nobody is looking at me,'" Lopez recalls to W magazine. "This loud sound started from the back of the room — it was kind of like a roar, over me in the dress. When I went to my seat, I said, 'What's the big deal?!' Puffy and Benny were waiting, and they said, 'You have to take pictures in that dress.'"





More on Clooney and Keibler split

While news of George Clooney and Stacy Keibler's split may have come as a surprise to some, the writing had apparently been on the wall for quite some time for their doomed relationship, according to Us Weekly. "They hadn't had sex in months," a source says. "He's been in Europe, and she's in L.A., and they haven't seen each other in a long time. Some girls would be OK with that and just be happy dating George, but not her." According to TMZ.com, the two ended their contract, erm, relationship, over the phone.

You know, being George Clooney's arm candy really does wonders for your status in life. Back in 2002, Keibler was just a WWE wrestler who listed "table dances" as some of her onstage moves. And now she's been on the red carpet of the Oscars twice and will host her own television show, "Supermarket Superstars," on Lifetime (it premieres on July 22; what a coincidence!).

I will hand it to Keibler — she's been able to parlay being George Clooney's plus-one into a celebrity career of her own better than most.

Radiant skin from the inside out

The Joanna Vargas Salon is located at 501 Fifth Ave. in New York. Call 212-949-2350 for an appointment. / JOANNA VARGAS

Beauty. Celebrity facialist Joanna Vargas shows us how to glow.

When Michelle Williams, Naomi Watts and Rachel Weisz need to get red carpet-ready, they head to renowned aesthetician Joanna Vargas' cozy NYC spa for her signature treatments, including the Triple Crown Facial, which exfoliates, purifies, de-puffs and tones the visage.

"It's a combination of some of the best technologies in skincare," says Vargas. "What people love about this treatment is that you can see a result right away. You don't have to rely on faith."

The expert recently received a patent for another high-tech breakthrough: The Time Machine, a full-body LED light bed, which helps clients look younger without any invasive Botox or surgery. We stopped by to learn more about this exclusive anti-aging treatment and get plenty of advice on how to keep our skin looking flawless all summer long — and beyond.

Follow these tips

Summer skin-care routine

- Exfoliate twice a week.
- Wash your face every night.
- Absolutely apply sunscreen every day. "For everyday use, SPF 30 is sufficient," says Vargas. "On the weekends if you're going to be out by the pool or out in the park, then you have to wear something like a 58 and it has to have zinc and titanium. You can't get Coppertone."

Her summer must-haves

1 Joanna Vargas Daily Hydrating Cream

$75, www.joannavargas.com
"It has zinc in it so it has around SPF 20."

2 Eminence Organic Mineral Sunscreen Powder SPF 30

$58, www.eminenceorganics.com
"It's translucent and I wear it over my makeup or even when I have a naked face. You can carry it in your purse and it absorbs the oil on your face."

3 Reviva Vitamin E stick with SPF 20

$4, Whole Foods
"It's very simple and hydrating."

Vargas' beauty advice

Drink green juices

"A green juice a day keeps the skin clean and glowing. It's a great replacement for your afternoon coffee and it will literally transform your skin in a matter of days. Green juice helps oxygenate the skin and stimulates lymphatic drainage so it's de-puffing, too. I love juice with romaine, celery, cucumber, spinach, parsley, kale and apple with a dash of lemon and ginger."

In addition to wearing sunscreen...

"Wash your face at night before bed! Your body repairs itself at night and that won't happen without you removing all the dirt and grime of the day."

See a nutritionist

"I recommend clients see a nutritionist when they have a skin condition they are trying to fix. The skin is a window into what is happening on the inside of us, and more specifically, our digestive system. Seeing a doctor like Frank Lipman just makes sense."

TURNING BEDROOM BLAHS INTO AAAAAHS

So you've slept with the same person seemingly 18 million times and you're feeling a little bored? (It's OK, you don't have to admit it out loud). Here's how to rekindle the heat.

1. Try

When you're in a long-term relationship, you can get lazy, stop trying to impress your partner and stop making good sex a priority (as long as you throw it in before bed a few nights a week it's all good, right?) It's not that you're a bad lay, it's that you've stopped trying to be good. If you had a one-night stand with someone from your office, you'd be a rock star simply because you'd care to impress them (it could be the first and last chance you'll ever get to show them what you're made of). So go home tonight and take the initiative to do your old ball-and-chain like it's the last time you'll get to sleep with them.

2. Mix it up

Sex gets boring when it's set up the same way every time. This applies to positions, of course, but also to timing. Is the only time you're having sex right before going to sleep? Why wait till you're tired and sex feels predictable? Rip your lover's clothes off the second you walk in the door. Have sex on the kitchen table right after dinner. Meet at home for "lunch" if your schedules allow it. Do it on the couch halfway though a movie. Just get out of the bedroom and do it before 10 p.m.!

3. Be worthy of getting laid

Sex is just as psychological as it is physical. If you've stopped connecting emotionally, then you're probably not going to connect physically either. Make sure that things are still exciting in your nonsexual relationship. Are you planning fun and exciting dates for each other? Are you learning more about each other and more about yourself? Are you taking up new hobbies and interests that keep you evolving as person? The less stagnant you can be as a person and as a lover, the hotter sex you will have. That, I can promise.

Welcome to your weekend

We were recently invited to a VIP tasting at Amada in Revel and, wow, it lived up to all the hype. From impeccable service to breathtaking views — yes, even the dining room has oceanfront views — it was what we've come to expect from Jose Garces. If you can only afford one item on the menu, make it the Costillas de Ternera. The dish features beef short ribs intertwined with horseradish and bacon. It's both sweet and spicy, and melts in your mouth.

Philly chefs down the shore

Restaurants.
Heading out to AC this weekend? You won't be homesick.

Buddakan's delicious dishes are at the beach, too. / PROVIDED

Jumping in the car to beat rush-hour traffic on Friday afternoons and hitting Atlantic City just in time for happy hour is as routine as ordering Wawa coffee. Once over the bridge, the workweek is a thing of the past.

Still, even the most serious weekend warrior can't help but miss the comforts of home. It's one of the main reasons that some of Philadelphia's top restaurants, places like Buddakan, Amada and Continental, continue to sprout up like sand castles along the shore.

"You can come to Buddakan Atlantic City and experience the great food and service that you're used to in Philadelphia," says chef Nery Hernandez, who worked at Continental on 18th and Chestnut before taking over as head chef at Buddakan (both are Stephan Starr spots) about a year and a half ago. "We want to give customers the same experience — at the same time, we want to step out of the box a little bit, try something you might not be accustomed to."

Buddakan has stayed true to its branding and layout — a dimly lit dining room that feels like a tuxedo-wearing Indiana Jones might sneak around the corner at any moment — but the food has a few curveballs.

"Thirty percent of the menu is completely different," Hernandez says, citing his sesame poached tuna entrée with yuzu aioli.

Chef Jose Garces agrees that familiarity is important. The menus are almost identical at Amada here at home and the Amada in hotel-casino Revel, aside from the A la Planxa section, which features the Fermin Iberico Pluma, a rare cut of pork from the black-footed Iberian pig that is flown in fresh twice a week from Spain. Garces wants customers to feel like they are being pampered when they sit down inside the Revel. He calls it destination dining.

"Amada in Philadelphia is a neighborhood restaurant," Garces says. "Being in a tourist town, Amada in Atlantic City is a destination. We made sure that if we were going to do it, we were going to do it right and really give people a taste of the Amada that they know and love."

Sashimi

Eat at Izakaya

Michael Schulson of Sampan, the Asian fusion restaurant in Midtown Village, and Graffiti Bar, the summer hot spot tucked right behind it, also has an Atlantic City presence. He's the owner and executive chef at the Borgata's upscale Japanese restaurant, Izakaya. And since everything is connected in Philly: Schulson was chef de cuisine at the first Buddakan.

We were treated to an experimental tasting menu when we came to check out his oceanside offerings at Izakaya, and happily filled up on large chunks of perfectly textured octopus in the Octopus Sashimi Salad, followed by the inventive Inside Out Uni Deviled Egg, featuring a mouth-watering smear of uni (sea urchin). We managed to save room for dessert, a tasting plate of chocolate, peanut butter, marshmallow, Heath crunch and pretzel heaven.

First storm the prison, then throw the party

Vive la France.
Celebrate Bastille Day with crepes, vin and Bearded Ladies.

Fight for freedom, and Tastykakes, at Eastern State. / ANDREW SIMCOX

We understand that the Fourth of July, with all its fireworks and hoopla, got you hyped on the idea of patriotic partying. So this weekend, celebrate the day the French stormed Bastille, a notorious prison. Whether you know the history, dig the food or just want to dress up like an 18th-century revolutionary, Philly is the place to go French.

Eastern State Penitentiary

Local cabaret troupe the Bearded Ladies will be at our own notorious prison re-enacting the storming of the Bastille, playing around with guillotines and resurrecting French figures like Joan of Arc and Edith Piaf. Get your grabbing fingers ready for everyone's favorite part of the party: when Marie Antoinette proclaims "Let them eat Tastykake!" while the "prisoners" toss down sweets.

Pernot is keeping it spicy in the kitchen

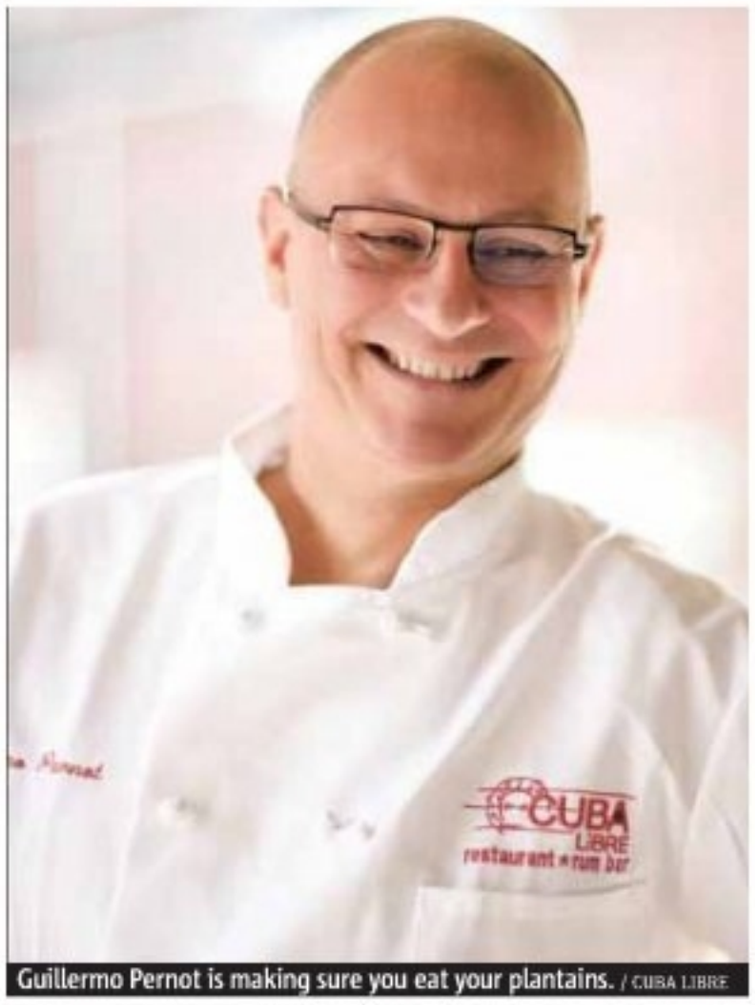
Hot Chef. The Cuba Libra cook is credited with introducing Latin food to Philly.

Free up your Tuesdays, people, because Cuba Libre has recently introduced a Tapas Tuesdays promo. For $27 you can taste all the tapas the "nuevo Cubano" restaurant has to offer. We caught up with Guillermo Pernot, the Argentina-born chef responsible not only for this old City hot spot but for the once loved, now closed ¡Pasión! Restaurant. No big deal or anything, but he's the guy who's usually credited with bringing Latin dining to Philly.

Whose idea was it to start Tapas Tuesdays, and how long will they run?
We decided as a group at the restaurant that we wanted something interesting to happen. We think that this is a way for people to experience what Cuba Libre is all about. It depends how successful it is, but we're keeping it around at least through the summer.

You opened Cuba Libre in 2001. How have you seen Second Street and Old City change?
Cuba Libre has been there for 12 years and it's a pillar of that part of town. It's helped to shape the food and entertainment in the neighborhood.

How has the food scene changed in Philly since you've been here?
It's come a long way. When I first moved here there were a few restaurants like Le Bec Fin and the Fish Market. Now you can go anywhere in the city and find major chefs like Morimoto and Garces. We have changed the cuisine scene. When I first started cooking in Philadelphia no one knew what a plantain was. I was the first making Latin food.



Guillermo Pernot is making sure you eat your plantains. / CUBA LIBRE

You live outside the city, right? What are you doing for fun on your days off?
Yes, I live in Wynnewood. I'm constantly working, moving from one restaurant to another. When I'm home, though, we invite friends over. We built a beautiful kitchen and our friends come over to cook together. The majority of my time is spent around food.

Have you been to any good summer concerts or festivals this year?
No. I love to go to concerts but it's difficult to find the time. The Rolling Stones were in town and I couldn't get out to see them, so they came to see me — we had a party for them at the restaurant. It was so cool to see Mick Jagger walk through the kitchen.

Give up your seats, kids

I am tired, physically and emotionally, of standing on a packed subway gazing down at the 20-somethings (or younger) occupying all the seats. I'm not superannuated, but I am nearly 60, and haven't passed for 20 in a long time. Well, I was raised differently. I always offer an older person or pregnant woman — or anyone who looks like they need it — my seat, because it's the right thing to do. I'm not patting myself on the back here, because everyone used to do this! Sadly, it seems that a once common courtesy is quickly dying out.

Smokers have no pity

Re: 'Smokers the butt of unfair prejudice' (Metro, July 9) I'm very allergic to cigarette smoke. Smokers keep lighting up at the bus stop, often not leaving me enough time to run to another stop. If I say anything, through the washcloth I'm holding over my mouth and nose, they say some lame garbage about how cars are worse for me. I'm trying to catch a bus to work, not jump in front of cars!

Embracing the tradition of the Orange and Black

NHL. The Flyers are hoping new guys Lecavalier, Emery and Streit can lead the team back to the playoffs.

For a franchise parched from thirst after 38 years without a drink from the Cup, the Flyers somehow remain a prime destination. Whether it's their renowned fan base, reputation as a club that plays with passion or the fact they have never shied away from handing out huge contracts, playing for the Orange and Black is hard to pass up.

Never did that seem more true than listening to the newest Flyers, mainly Vinny Lecavalier, Mark Streit and Ray Emery, extol the virtues of a team that missed the playoffs this past season. They point to the "weirdness" of a lockout-shortened season, coupled with a rash of injuries, as justification for the 2013 Flyers' demise.

"Playing with the Islanders, it's so tough to play in this building," said the 35-year-old Streit. "They were always so physical and skilled. It's a great hockey town with great tradition."

Lecavalier, who met with a number of teams after Tampa bought out the seven years left on his contract, quickly moved Philly to the top.

"I talked to Simon Gagne and other players," said Lecavalier. "I did my homework. Everyone had good things to say. This is a first-class organization."

Emery, who credits the Flyers in helping him find the right surgery to fix his hip, said he's thrilled to have a second chance.

"The first time I came here, I was super excited, like I am now," said the 30-year-old goaltender. "I kept my relationships within the team, knowing how classy the organization and how passionate [owner] Mr. [Ed] Snider is."

How well all that affection translates on the ice is all that matters.

"You can make excuses, but the bottom line is we didn't make the playoffs," said Snider."But with the three guys sitting at this table, I'm as excited as I've been in many years."

Angels in the outfield: Phils finding magic

MLB. Ben Revere, Delmon Young and Domonic Brown form a formidable trio for the resurgent Phillies.

Taking notice

Rival managers are impressed with the Phillies outfield right now, too.

- "They look awfully good, and they're really young, like we are," Braves skipper Fredi Gonzalez said. "I think they're all going to get even better."

The outfield was the biggest question mark when spring training commenced. The only certainty was that Ben Revere would play center.

But there were concerns about the young, fleet slap-hitter. Revere only played center for a quarter of his games in 2012 for Minnesota. The corner spots were up for grabs. Domonic Brown had to earn a starting job, or he was ticketed back to Triple-A. Delmon Young was rehabbing his surgically repaired ankle in the Grapefruit League.

However, the outfield has surprisingly come together. Brown is headed to the All-Star Game with the second-most homers in the NL as of July 10.

"I always knew I had the ability to play ball up here," Brown said. "I just needed to be healthy and get the chance to get it going. I finally got that chance, and I've made the most of it."

Revere is hitting .302 after struggling to hit .200 during the first two months of the season. Since May 1, Revere has a tremendous BABIP (batting average on balls in play) of .380.

"I'm not trying to do anything different," Revere said. "I'm just trying to get my bat on the ball. I think I'm striking out less now, which helps. If you put the ball in play, you never know what will happen."

Young is starting to turn it on with the bat. During the last road trip, Young boosted his average a whopping 53 points. He recorded five multi-hit games on the trip after just six multi-hit games in his first 45 contests.

"I'm just feeling more comfortable," Young said. "It's pretty simple. I missed spring training. I had a more difficult road to travel, but I'm getting there."

Daulton needs treatment for brain cancer

MLB. The ex-Phillie will undergo treatment in Florida after being diagnosed with glioblastoma.

Daulton has cancer.
GETTY IMAGES

It seemed like Darren Daulton was out of the woods. It's never that easy with cancer.

On July 10, the former Phillies catcher was diagnosed with glioblastoma, an aggressive form of brain cancer. Last week, Daulton had successful surgery to remove two tumors in his brain. He'll begin treatments at his home in Florida.

"Darren and his family wish to thank everyone for their loving support throughout this difficult time," a statement from the Darren Daulton Foundation said. "He is deeply touched. In typical fashion, he again said, 'Right on; fight on.' Darren and his family request that everyone respect his privacy and that of his family during this period of time. At his urging, I can report that the Sept. 9, 2013, golf tournament that benefits the Foundation will continue as planned."

Daulton had been hosting a radio show on 97.5 FM The Fanatic. He spent 14 seasons with the Phillies, most memorably as a part of the 1993 World Series team.
